This is true. Indeed, consider such a pair \((m, w)\) and consider a perfect matching containing pairs \((m, w')\) and \((m', w)\), and, hence, not \((m, w)\). Then since \(m\) and \(w\) each rank the other first, they each prefer the other to their partners in this matching, and so this matching cannot be stable.